

Being Purpose-Driven

Purpose always group to orient outward always without explicit order.

Evaluating actions against purpose is an effective way to make decisions toward a common goal without being told what to do or how to do it.

Purpose is superior to values because it can't be used to exclude and alienate people.

For any action, ask yourself, "Does this serve my role's purpose?"

Being Purpose-Driven

Purpose allows a group to orient toward a goal without explicit orders.

Evaluating actions against purpose is an effective way to make decisions toward a common goal without being told what to do or how to do it.

Purpose is superior to values because it can't be used to exclude and alienate people.

For any action, ask yourself, "Does this serve my role's purpose?"

Work “on” the organization, not just “in” it.